FOREWORD

It is a great pleasure for ICAHM, the ICOMOS International Committee for Archaeological Heritage Management, to be able to organize this meeting in China. We have found that contacts between archaeological heritage managers from western countries and from China are still quite limited while at the same time an exchange of expertise is highly valued. Where best practices in archaeology are concerned, both sides have much to offer. Of course there are challenges such as the language barrier, but this can increasingly be overcome.

When we received an invitation from Jishou University, we were therefore very happy to accept it. The fact that the meeting actually takes place is also due to the invaluable assistance from ICOMOS-China, who provided crucial help in co-organizing this meeting with us. We are also grateful to our colleagues from Chengdu and Xi'an for their help in organizing interesting excursions and to ArchaeoConcept from Switzerland in assisting with the factual preparations.

We hope that the meeting will be the start of fruitful discussions about principles and best practices that may continue in the future, but also of friendships that last. After all, new initiatives and directions are not only borne out of joint efforts that are interdisciplinary and intercultural, but out of the personal relations that went before that.
